Regenerative Leadership Training (In Development)

To protect as much biodiversity as we can, we must help people transition to a sustainable way of life, and a regenerative relationship with the environment as quickly as possible.

Social Enterprise Development

Impact Centers (which include social enterprises, wellness and education centers, intentional communities, organic food producers and distributors, environmental educators, community organizers, permaculture and conservation projects), may be humanity's best hope for creating the new economic, education, and food systems society needs.

We are accelerating their work by providing them with an effective organizational operating system; a set of models, plans, guides and tools that includes

Regenerative Business Models
Strategic Expansion Plans
Sustainable Business Development Guides
Financial Strategies and Tools
Project Management Tools
Event Planning and Coordination Models

Catalyst Experience Network

By integrating holistic eco-social values into powerful business systems and tools, and sharing them with the most impactful organizations, we are creating a positive feedback loop and exponential growth in all the regenerative systems needed to live in thriving collaborative communities.

By making it easy, efficient, and profitable to develop and coordinate regenerative local economies, we are massively expanding the number of organizations working effectively together to create an ecologically balanced and socially equitable economy.

Upward Spirals
We're building tools, templates, guides, business plans, and social benefit programs for leaders of regenerative projects, to help us all accelerate the co-creation of a regenerative society
